We also offer a variety of FREE workshops. You do not need to be a current client to attend the workshops and you can just drop in; no commitment is needed. Check our website to learn more and view the most updated-to-date schedule.

TORNADO INFORMATION
In Indiana, tornadoes—dangerous whirlwinds—can happen any time of the year, but they occur most frequently in the spring. Local radio and TV stations broadcast weather advisories if severe weather approaches this area. The term “tornado watch” means that a tornado could develop; however, a “tornado warning” indicates that a tornado is detected and that you should seek shelter at once. Sirens are sounded in Bloomington and Monroe County when a tornado approaches. If you hear a siren, go immediately to the lowest floor in the building. Pick an interior room, (no outside walls or windows). Turn on your radio or television to a local station for further information. If you are outside, lie down in a ditch or up against a rock wall. For additional information, contact IU Emergency Management & Continuity at iuemc@iu.edu, or see www.protect.iu.edu.
